Although the gray equired lays up some store of nuts for the winter, he is not a very provident housekeeper, and enjoys his food as he gets it. He sleeps through the rugged weather in some hollow branch or tree trunk, but the warm winter sunshine will sometimes lure him out even when the snow is tying on the hills. Still, he is not wholly maprovident, as the empty nutshells about his winter quarters testify. His character has a poacher is not above suspicion, and many a bird's next is rifled of both eggs and down young when they fall in the way of his rambles. A rather remarkable feature has a poacher is not above suspicion, and many a bird's next is rifled of both eggs and down young when they fall in the way of his rambles. A rather remarkable feature in the life of a gray squirrel is the irregular migratory movements which numbers of the maske at various times, more especially in the fall of the year. For many years the gray squirrels may be scarce in many sections of country, when all at once, some fine autumn morning, the woods and fields are overrun with them; Broad rivers offer.

Still, he is not wholly are overum with 'hem; Broad rivers offer no barrier to their progress; mountain ranges are crossed, and whole areas of wood land are given over to them. These occa-

The cause of these movements is undoubted-ly a scarcity of food compelling them to leave, and under a common impulse they unite in one great body and migrate else where.—Philadelphia Times. A TERRIBLE MISTAKE .- A lady of San Francisco, whose little feet are always daintily shod, is also the unfortunate pos sessor of an obstinate and burning corn upon the smallest toe of her left foot. Chireportists and one tunnels through that corn, yanked at it with nippers, smeared it with stinging continents, and, in despair, suggested amputation. The corn held the fort and successfully resisted the assaults of the best razor the lady's husband possessed—used, of course, without his knowledge. Finally, a kind friend suggested that if phosphorous was robbed on the afflicted toe the corn would succumb. The lady deter—TATE IN THE CURY OF TABLE STATE IN THE CURY OF The state of the corporation Court of the city of Alexandria do certify that the bond required by Geo. A. Clerk. the corn would succumb. The lady deter mined to try the remedy, and did so just be fore retiring, and forgot to tell her liege lord what she had done. The hour of midnight had struck when the husband sudden by awoke, and was somewhat started to see the flash of a firefly at the toot of the bed. Steep was again asserting its mastery, when once more the sheen of that firefly caused the husband to open wide his eyes. He could not recollect ever having seen a firefly in a flashed its baneful gleam, effectually banishing all thought of sleep from the new thoroughly-aroused and wrathy husband. He determined to end his own misery and the firefly's existence simultaneously. He reached out in the dark, groped with his hand about the carpet until he felt his own heavy shee. He seized the weapon, slowly the firefly's existence simultaneously. He reached out it the dark, groped with his hand about the carpet until he felt his own heavy shoe. He seized the weapon, slowly and cautiously raised himself in bed, and lifting high the sturdy brogan, brought it down with a vigorous whack on the inno-cent firefly. A wild shriek, an avalanche of bedelothes, and the bushand lay sprawling is the middle of the floor, while his wife rolled around the bed, clasping her foot and meaning it anguish. It was not a firefly. It was the phosphorous anointed too. CHOKED TO DEATH BY A PEANUT .- TWO vecks ago last Monday, while Bessie, the twenty-two-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs Eugene Hopkins, was eating peanuts, one got into her windpipe and passed down into the right bronchus. She began cheking violently. Her mother tried to stop the cooking, and sent for Dr. White. Soon af-ter he arrived the peanut seemed to come up into the traches, and she was at once re lieved, although the peanut could not gotten out. On the following Sunday she had another choking spell, caused by the peanut again passing down into the bron-chus. Drs. White and Hyde, who were called, could do little for her, and just as they thought that she would die, the peanut again came up into the traches, and she stopped choking. Had the peanut been fixed an incision could have been made in the traches and the nut could have been re-moved, but it kept moving about, and was liable at any time to return to the bronchus. There was no further trouble, however, un til last Monday, when suddenly, while play-ing on the floor and apparently as well as ever, the peanut again slipped down into the bronchus, and before she could be re-Heved she died .- Cortland (N. THE RAHWAY MURDER.-A strange woman accompanied Detective Gregory, of New Brunswick, to the police station yesterday and there identified the clothing of the mysterious woman found murdered last spring as that of Annie J. Ingram. The woman had formerly employed Annie and had made some of her clothing. Aunie had a husband in New Brunswick. The detectives are reticent, but say they think they have struck the right clew.
